October Weather.

Rev. Irl Hicks' predictions for October are as follows: Cool days and frost at night in the north, are probable about the 8th to 10th. From about the 17th to 20th look for heavy rains, hail, thunder, wind and possibly tornadoes southward. A high barometer will rush down from the northwest, causing sleet and snow on the northwest tangent; and winding up much of the country with a very severe dash of early winter. A general cool wave will end this period, being quite sharp northward and bringing the temperature down to frost line quite far into the southern states. Very marked storm conditions will appear to the west about the 29th, and as these conditions move eastward during 30th and 31st, heavy autumnal storms will touch both sections of the country.

HAVING been solicited by a number of persons to open a cooking school in Paris this Fall, I have decided to do so early in October if a sufficient number of pupils can be secured. All persons desiring to take one or more lessons, will please give me their names within the next few days. I wish to state that I have made arrangements with Mr. Sciger, of Louisville, to furnish on short notice, individual ices, fancy cases and ornaments for serving same. Terms—Ten lessons $4; single lesson 50c.

The Havana Limited.

The first American railway to announce train service for the especial benefit of travel to the West Indies has been heard from. The Queen & Crescent Route is announcing a fast train known as the Florida & Havana Limited. It will go into service from Cincinnati to Tampa, Jacksonville, Miami, Mobile and New Orleans. This exponent of the genuine American idea of getting into the field early will be a complete vestibuled service with diners, observation cars, wide vestibules, electric headlights, and all the paraphernalia of the modern railroad train. It is chiefly to be marveled as being first in the field for the new territory which is just coming under the protection of the greatest thing on earth. Train will make fast time to ports named and will connect with fine steamers to various ports in Cuba, Porto Rico and Jamaica. It marks a new era in railroading in this country.

THERE are eggs and eggs. The egg of yesterday looks, feels, measures and weighs like the egg of last month, but there's a difference in another respect, and that difference is worth money. Its just so with laundry. The difference between good work and poor is slight to the unpracticed discernment, but it's a difference that counts every time. It's a difference that changes your laundry bill from an expense to an investment. We do good work—it will cost no more than poor work but its worth double the difference.

THIRTEEN SAFE.

Twelve Bodies of the Passengers of the Mohegan Have Been Rescued.

Thirty-Eight Bodies Have Been Identified, Mostly the Bodies of Sailors—Tugs in the Vicinity of the Accident to Pick up Bodies.

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The Atlantic Transport Co.'s steamer Mohegan, formerly the Cleopatra, of the Wilson & Furness-Leyland line, which left London for New York Thursday with 50 passengers and a crew of 150, is ashore off the Lizard, between the Manacles and the Lowlands.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The Atlantic Transport Co. issued the following statement Sunday evening regarding the fate of the passengers and crew of the steamer Mohegan, which was wrecked last Friday evening off the Lizard, between the Manacles and the Lowlands: Of the passengers 11 have been saved, 10 bodies have been recovered and 33 are missing.

"Of the crew and cabinmen 39 have been saved, 14 bodies have been recovered and 51 are missing."

Since this statement was issued nine other bodies have been picked up, including two that have been identified as those of passengers.

The reports of the various correspondents differ widely as to the rescues, recoveries and losses, though none have been able to obtain the exact number of those saved or of the bodies recovered.

The bodies of the following passengers have been recovered: T. W. King, Edna King, Master King, Jas. Blackey, Miss H. M. Cowen, Dr. Fallows, B. Franklin Fuller, Mrs. L. M. Luke, George Seymour, Miss L. H. Warrenner.

The latest advices from Falmouth Sunday evening say that 38 bodies have been identified, mostly the bodies of sailors. Four are as yet unidentified, including those of two elderly ladies. One appears to be a German. She wore a watch and a wedding ring, both engraved "1871." The other wore a silver brooch, with the letter "D" in pearls. This is probably the body of Mrs. Charles Duncan.

Nine of the bodies have been brought to Falmouth, the others to the village church at St. Keverne. The rescued passengers are being sheltered at cottages along the shore and the crew at the sailors' home at Falmouth.

Tugs have been cruising in the vicinity all day Sunday, despite the very rough weather, in hope of picking up other bodies. The cause of the disaster remains the profoundest mystery.

Nobody attempts to explain how the Mohegan got so far north of her true course—from 6 to 7 miles. There was no fog at the time; while the wind on her port quarter was not sufficient to prevent her answering the helm. It has been suggested that her compass was faulty; but daylight lasted long after Eddystone light was passed.

The sailors say the fact that the Lizard light was not visible should have served to give the alarm.

The masts of the Mohegan, which are above water, show that her stern is landward, causing a theory that the navigating officer on discovering that he was in the bay suddenly turned seaward. Two engineers who were saved declare, however, that they never slackened speed.

Remarkable stories of rescue continue.

Robert Barrow, a seaman, performed the feat of swimming, unaided, through the roughest water to Coverack Point, a distance of two and one-half miles. He climbed up the ragged cliff, where a searching party found him early the next morning, completely exhausted. A. C. L. Smith, of Oregon, a passenger, surrendered to a woman in the water wreckage that was supporting him and swam ashore unaided. The woman was saved. Her name is reported as Miss Webb, but no such name appears in the company's list.

Messrs. Smith and W. J. Bloomingdale say there was the greatest difficulty in launching the boats. The ropes were new and stiff and the blocks would not work. Four or five times as many sailors as should have been necessary struggled to lower each boat. The lockers were hard to open.

The crew, in a chivalrous effort to save the women, made the mistake of undermanning the boats. There were only four sailors in one boat, which capsized as soon as it was launched. Messrs. Smith and Bloomingdale say that Capt. Griffiths had appeared ill all day.

Giantess' Body Stolen.

MIDDLEBOROUGH, Ky., Oct. 17.—It is reported that the body of Mahala Mullins, the 630-pound woman who died at Walden's Ridge not long ago, has been stolen.

Defied the Americans.

MANILA, Oct. 17.—The insurgents at Lagaspi have prevented the American steamer Hermanos from loading or unloading, on the ground that there are Spaniards on board. They also refused to allow an officer of the United States cruiser Raleigh to land without permission of Gen. Aguinaldo.

Jerusalem Crowded With Visitors.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 17.—The city is already overcrowded with visitors, chiefly Germans, awaiting the arrival of Emperor William.

TROOPS TO GO TO MANILA.

They Have Been Officially Assigned and the First Will Probably Sail From San Francisco on Monday.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—The troops to go to Manila on the transport Valencia have been officially assigned. They include the 3d battalion of the Washington regiment, composed of Companies F, G, I, and L, under Lieut. Fife, which has been stationed on Angel island and a portion of the batteries A and D of the California heavy artillery.

With the assistant surgeons and members of the hospital corps the Valencia will carry 509 men. The troops will in all probability go into the transport on Monday and the Senator and Valencia will sail together. The Ohio and Indiana will be ready the last of next week and the Newport by the end of the month. It is generally conceded that Gen. Miller and his headquarters, with a battalion, possibly from the Tennessee regiment, will sail on the Newport.

The Pennsylvania and Rio Janeiro are expected to arrive any day and only a few other vessels will be required to move all the troops ordered to the Philippines.

GEN. FRANCIS V. GREENE.

COLOR LINE IN THE ARMY.

Ex-Confederate Objects to the Appointment of Negro Officers—Resolutions Passed to That Effect.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 17.—The appointment of colored commissioned officers in the Negro regiments in the volunteer army has caused quite a commotion in this section. A protest was registered by Commander Fort, of U. B. Forest Camp, confederate veterans.

In the Grand Army halls the question has been discussed, and Missionary post passed the following:

"Resolved, That we, as soldiers of the civil war, and many of us having served by the side of colored regiments officered by white men, and having lived for many years in the south, do hereby recommend to the present military authorities in Washington, D. C., that it is not expedient to have colored commissioned officers in the army, either as volunteers or regulars."

THE WINDOW GLASS PLANTS.

They Failed to Start the Season's Operations Friday Night Throughout the Country Owing to Strike.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 17.—The window glass plants throughout the United States failed to start the season's operations at midnight Friday. Fires were blocked and may be extinguished and 15,000 workers, who have been looking forward to a general resumption on October 15, are forced to remain idle. The strike is for an advance in the wages of the cutters and flatteners, but is really the result of a fight between the Knights of Labor and the American Federation of Labor.

The manufacturers say the fires will be kept blocked for a reasonable time, when they will be extinguished and not relighted, until they are sure to have a clear and concise contract with the workers.

THE YELLOW FEVER RECORD.

Eight New Cases at Jackson, Miss., No Deaths—Six Cases at Yazoo City—Three Deaths and 19 Cases at Other Points.

JACKSON, Miss., Oct. 17.—The Jackson record of new cases of yellow fever for Sunday was eight, as follows:

W. E. Davison, Otto Galle, Donnie Cloud, Callie Cloud, Prof. Moore, Otto Johnson and two Negroes.

There were no deaths though some of the sick are seriously ill. Dr. Purnell who investigated suspicious sickness at Yazoo City reported Sunday that he found six cases of genuine yellow fever there. The state board of health reports three deaths and 19 new cases at other points.

The New Military Hospital.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Col. Middleton has finally decided upon the Presidio reservation as the site for the new military hospital, and the selection has been approved by Gen. Merriam. It will be located near the provisional hospital.

American Fever Hospital at Havana.

HAVANA, via Key West, Oct. 17.—Drs. Lane and O'Reilly have made a report to the surgeon general insisting upon the immediate establishment of an American fever hospital here.

PEACE JUBILEE.

It Was Inaugurated in Chicago With a Union Thanksgiving Service.

Over 12,000 People Were in the Hall and as Many More on the Outside Unable to Gain Admission—McKinley the University's Guest.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The national peace jubilee of Chicago was Sunday night inaugurated with a union thanksgiving service at the Auditorium. President McKinley attended and listened to addresses by a Jewish Rabbi, a Roman Catholic priest, a Presbyterian clergyman and a noted colored orator. The applause for the president was terrific, and at one time he was compelled to rise in his box and respond to the frantic cheering of the audience. The services, however, were of a religious character, and at times the solemn silence of the vast assemblage was much more eloquent than the wildest applause could be.

The president rested during a great part of the day at the residence of Capt. Lafayette McWilliams, his relative, where he is being entertained. He did not attend church in the morning. For a short time in the afternoon he was taken for a drive in company with Mrs. McKinley, Capt. McWilliams and Mrs. McWilliams.

The party was driven to the Auditorium at 8 o'clock, and all along the way people lined the streets to watch the passage of the president's carriage. Easily 12,000 people were within the great Auditorium, and probably as many more were on the outside unable to obtain admittance.

The president was seated in a box on the left side of the Auditorium and with him were Alexander H. Revell, President Wm. R. Harper, of the University of Chicago, Capt. McWilliams, and Secretaries Porter and Cortelyou. Among the occupants of the other boxes were James McKinley, the president's nephew, Secretary Wilson and Miss Wilson, Secretary and Mrs. Gage, Secretary Bliss, Assistant Secretary Meiklejohn and Postmaster Gordon.

Elaborate music had been prepared for the meeting under the direction of Henry B. Roney. Rev. Dr. Henry W. Thomas, pastor of the People's church, was chairman of the meeting, Bishop Samuel Fallows led in the recital of the Lord's prayer, and Rev. Dr. Jenkins Lloyd Jones in the responsive reading.

The first address was by Rabbi Emil G. Hirsch, who brought out a great burst of enthusiasm by a reference to President McKinley.

Rev. Dr. Thomas P. Hodnett, a Catholic clergyman, caught the fancy and applause of the audience by repeated references to Dewey, Sampson, Schley and the rough riders, and when he mentioned President McKinley by name the people became so demonstrative that the president was compelled to rise in his box and bow his acknowledgments. At the conclusion of his address Dr. Hodnett aroused much enthusiasm by a philippic against the "growing influence of monopoly and the cohesive power of unjust corporations."

One of the most stirring speeches of the evening was made by Rev. Dr. John Henry Barrows, who took a firm stand in favor of the retention of the Philippines, which sentiment appeared to meet entirely the approbation of the audience.

Booker T. Washington was the last speaker. His address was listened to with marked attention.

Monday for the most part of the day the president was the guest of the University of Chicago, from which institution he will receive the degree of LL. D.

AN EXPLOSION AND MURDER.

Gas Explodes in the Pana Coal Co.'s Shaft—A Negro Miner Shoots and Fatal Wounds Isiah Ross, Colored.

PANA, Ill., Oct. 17.—A bad fire is burning in Pana Coal Co.'s shaft No. 1. It was started by an explosion of gas in the north entry at noon Saturday, and so far it has been impossible for the company to extinguish it. An effort was made to drag it out, but failing in that, men were sent down Sunday afternoon to build partition walls in hopes of smothering it out.

When the explosion occurred there were about 40 Negroes at work in adjoining chambers, but none was injured.

Sunday evening at 5:30 o'clock John Hawkins, a Negro miner employed at Pana Shaft No. 1, fatally shot Isiah Ross, also colored, as the result of an all day quarrel. The shooting occurred in the company's office where Ross sought safety and was done with a Springfield rifle, a number of which were found there. Maj. Butler, commanding the militia, will disarm the Negroes Monday.

Two Drowned.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—William Lourie and John Welch, both of Newark, were drowned in Newark bay Sunday afternoon. In company with two other young men they went crabbing. The water got rough, however, and they put back. While alongside the Lehigh Valley railroad bridge and endeavoring to climb upon the structure piers Welch fell into the water. Lourie seized him by the shoulder, but he was dragged down, and both were drowned.

A MILITARY PLOT IN PARIS.

An Effort to Disperse the Troops That Are Now in the French Capital—Duke of Orleans.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—A long and vague semi-official statement appeared Friday evening suggesting various possible motives—such as Dreyfusite intrigues or an attempt by the socialists to frighten the government into dispersing the troops that now prevent the success of the strike—to explain the rumors of a military conspiracy.

The mysterious allusions, however, and the absence of any straightforward denial tend to encourage the belief that there must be some ground for the rumors, especially as the statement mentions the telegrams alleged to have been sent by a French general to Prince Napoleon, which it says is "difficult to believe possible in view of the control exercised by the telegraph authorities."

LONDON, Oct. 15.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says: "It is impossible to obtain clear proofs of the existence of a plot. I believe, however, that the idea of some act of force haunts certain military minds. Maddened and stung by violent criticisms of the army arising out of the Dreyfus affair, they are especially irritated at the attitude of the civilians in claiming to interfere in the detention of Col. Picquart, for which the entire military authority is responsible."

"Looking to the excited state of men's minds at the present time of conflict between the military and civil authorities, it is only surprising that such alarms are not more frequent."

PARIS, Oct. 15.—The Liberte asserts that the military men alleged to have been concerned in the conspiracy are Gens. Boisdeffer and Pelleux.

Attempts, it is added, were also made to compromise Gen. Zurlinden, the military governor of Paris, who, for a short time was minister of war, but it appears the present minister of war, Gen. Chanoine, refused to countenance it.

According to the Jour, the rumor of the plot arose from a forged letter, purporting to have been sent by Gen. Boisdeffer to Gen. Zurlinden, containing these words:

"Let us be ready for Saturday." The semi-official Temps Friday evening minimizes the affair and says the officials of the ministry of war formally deny that a plot existed.

The Temps suggests that the misinterpretation was placed on some of the numerous dispatches now being exchanged between the different garrisons, in connection with the present movement of troops, which led to strange reports of plots.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 15.—The duke of Orleans, accompanied by Comte Sabran Ponteves, has arrived here to watch events.

The papers here believe the reports of a coup. The Etoile Belge regards it as "the last desperate effort of the French general staff to save itself from downfall."

Other papers say that the conspirators had been meeting clandestinely at Versailles and that M. Brisson has intercepted cipher correspondence pointing to a design to seize 50 prominent republicans.

BLANCO RECEIVES ORDERS.

He Has Been Notified to Hold Cuban Territory Until the Treaty of Peace Has Been Signed.

BAYONNE, France, Oct. 15.—According to advices received from Madrid a rigorous censorship has been revived there since Thursday.

Senor Sagasta and his colleagues are said to be greatly concerned regarding the demands of the United States government, which they assert not only refuses to assume any of Spain's colonial debts, but wants to take the heavy artillery in Cuba and the floating dock recently sent to Havana.

The same advices, says the Madrid Imparcial, announces that the government has cabled Captain-General Blanco not to turn over any more territory to the Americans until the peace treaty has been definitely signed.

Our Treatment of Spanish Captives.

Never before in history was there a case where a defeated and captive enemy received such generous treatment as we gave the Spaniards. Other nations are astonished. Equally astonishing are the cures brought about by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Never before in history has there been so successful a medicine for the weak, debilitated and nervous, for stomach and liver disorders like dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness and constipation. All nations have benefited by it, and all praise it.

THE CUBAN DEBT

American and Spanish Peace Commissioners at Loggerheads.

Spaniards Say It Would Be an Extraordinary Course to Saddle Spain With the Debt, While Surrendering the Security to Pay It.

LONDON, Oct. 17.—The Paris correspondent of the Times says: "The peace negotiations are necessarily slow, being conducted less by exchange of words than exchange of notes and statements. Señor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish commission, does not understand English. Consequently the few words exchanged must be interpreted and even then, they are definitive till committed to paper."

"The Cuban debt question has thus been laid on the table, and the American commissioners had already given a peremptory refusal to discuss a principle which had been settled, as they considered, by the peace preliminaries. Faithful to the attitude adopted by them from the outset, they seemed resolved to take their stand on the instructions—or rather, as I have already said, the precise and concise orders—which they brought with them, but the Spaniards, on their side, do not think themselves bound to bow with docility to the imperative instructions of another government."

"They returned to the charge Saturday, if I am well informed, urging the generally admitted principle which imposes on conquerors the burdens belonging to the territory conquered, either in their own behalf or that of their clients. They insisted that it would be an extraordinary course to saddle Spain, already in so lamentable a financial position, with the Cuban debt, while surrendering to the victor the security with which it should be paid."

"They remarked, according to my information, that if they had asked the United States for permission to raise interest out of the customs revenues, they would naturally have met with a refusal. How then can they be asked to leave to the visitor the pledge allowing payment of interest and yet retain the burden of debt? They observed, however, that, as Cuba is the key to the Gulf of Mexico, the United States will thus be able to pass the only barrier which they had hitherto been unable to cross at will, and that is worth some sacrifice."

"Hence the Spanish commissioners insist, in the name of recognizing international law, that the debt should not rest solely on Spanish shoulders. It is impossible to foretell the American reply, but it is not likely that Mr. Day and his colleagues will yield. An idea is afloat—and said to be warmly advocated by the friends of peace and justice—that the interest should be reduced 2½ per cent, or even to 2 per cent, and jointly guaranteed by the Spaniards and the future rulers of Cuba, each thus bearing only a very slight burden and the bondholders being protected from loss on their investment. This last information does not emanate either from Spaniards or Americans, but there is an intention of backing it so as to give it some chance of success."

THE JUGULAR VEIN SEVERED

Body Bearing Evidence of Foul Play Found Floating in the Water in Gravesend Bay, Near New York City.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—A man's body, bearing strong evidences of foul play, was found Sunday floating in Gravesend Bay. The throat had been cut from ear to ear, evidently by some keen instrument, the wound being a clean one. The jugular vein was severed. There was also the mark of a blow on the left breast. Apparently the body had been in the water about a week. The man had been about 36 years old, five feet eight inches in height and weighing about 160 pounds. The body was nude. There were no marks by which the identity of the victim could be traced.

CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Warrants Sworn Out for the Arrest of the Managers of the Virden-Chicago Coal Co., at Virden, Ill.

VIRIDEN, Ill., Oct. 14.—The excitement of Wednesday prior to the arrival of the Negro train, was equaled Thursday night when it became known that a special train consisting of one box car, three apparently empty coaches and a caboose that passed through here at 5:25 Thursday evening bore two car loads of Negroes taken through here to Springfield Wednesday. The train went south and by a clever ruse succeeded in passing through Virden quietly and without interference. A big crowd of miners was at the station but the militia held them in check.

When the train stopped at the stockade Capt. Fevier, who was in command, then shouted: "Don't allow any one to disembark from that train."

The gate was opened and a file of soldiers rushed out on the double quick with fixed bayonets and lined up along side of the train. General Manager Lukens made a formal request that their employees be allowed to land and enter the stockade. Capt. Fevier declined to grant this. Then Lukens put it in the form of a demand, but the officer replied that he was under orders from Gov. Tanner to prevent the disembarking of any Negro miners at the works and he would have to carry out those instructions. General Manager Lukens protested in vain and the train pulled out headed south.

By this time the advance guard of strikers gathered at the depot had advanced up the track to within 100 yards of the stockade. The presence of armed blue coats in the lookout boxes evidently halted them as they remained there until the train passed, when they greeted it with waving hats and cheers for Gov. Tanner, who they believed had been instrumental in starting the blacks on their homeward journey.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 14.—Ernest Long, the Mount Olive miner shot through the chest in the battle at Virden Wednesday and brought to St. Johns hospital after the fight, died Thursday. Herman and Boston are both alive and did not die on the train. Herman's death is momentarily expected at the hospital.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 14.—William Harmon, a miner of Girard, died here Thursday night, making the fourteenth death as a result of the riot in Virden Wednesday.

VIRIDEN, Ill., Oct. 14.—At 10:20 o'clock Thursday a special train arrived bearing Troops A and C, dismounted cavalry, from Chicago, and three companies of Sons of Veterans.

Col. Young stated that he had no definite orders other than to reinforce the soldiers already here.

VIRIDEN, Ill., Oct. 15.—As a result of a meeting held by a number of union miners, during which the terrible fight of Wednesday was discussed, a warrant has been sworn out by Virgil Bishop, a union miner, charging the managers of the Chicago-Virden Coal company, Messrs. Lukens, Loucks, Yorke and others, with murder.

Bishop is one of the leaders among the union miners. The warrant was sworn out by him before Police Magistrate Roberts, of Virden. The complaint charges that "Fred W. Lukens, T. C. Loucks and Mr. Yorke, on and before October 12, as accessories before and after the fact and as principals, did amongst themselves and together with persons so named as H. Gritzel, O. J. Snyder, Jas. Sickles, F. Wilder, T. McEntee, J. W. Moonan, P. J. Hannan, J. H. Smith and others whose names are at present unknown, conspire to murder and kill, and as a result of said conspiracy did on October 12, 1898, kill and murder Frank Bilyer, W. S. Herman, Daniel Breneman, Edward Green, Joseph Kuttler, Ellis Smith and Edward Welsh against the peace of the people of the state of Illinois."

Magistrate Roberts put the warrant in his pocket for safe keeping and now carries it around with him. At first it was decided to serve the warrant Friday but after deliberation it was thought best to avoid complications to hold it until after the inquest has been completed.

This decision was strengthened when Magistrate Roberts, who is foreman of the coroner's jury, began Friday's session of the inquest within the stockade.

Friday afternoon a rumor became general that the Negroes were to be brought back at any moment.

Capt. Craig's men immediately surrounded the railroad station and the vicinity was cleared of citizens.

Newspaper men alone are admitted to the premises. Lieut. Henry stated that his orders are not to stop any more passenger trains, as was done Thursday night, but under no circumstances to allow the Negro trains to pass the depot.

Negro Miner Assaulted.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 14.—A colored miner claiming to be one of those brought from the south Wednesday for Virden, was assaulted at the depot here Thursday by white miners, they finding that he was on his way to Virden. Officers interfered. He was not badly hurt, but was surrounded again and taken possession of by the miners and taken to the hall of the Miners' union, where he remained in the custody of the miners. A large crowd of miners surrounded the hall, but were not boisterous.

POWERFUL NAVY

Fifty-Five War Vessels Now Under Contract for the Government.

Twenty of the Vessels Are in Various Stages of Readiness and the Shipbuilders Are Hurriedly Gathering Material for Construction of the Others.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14.—The remarkable rapidity with which the naval power of the United States is being increased at the present time may be realized when it is stated that 55 war vessels are now under contract for the government and that their aggregate tonnage far exceeds that of the vessels building at any one time in the civil war. This vast construction programme, which has excited more attention abroad than at home has been authorized gradually by congress until the vessels soon to be completed will place the United States third in rank among the sea powers. In addition to the enormous fleet, including auxiliaries, actually in commission at the present time, 20 vessels are in various stages of readiness and the shipbuilders are hurriedly gathering the material for 35 others. Of the 55 vessels, eight are first-class, heavily armored sea-going battle ships, 38 are torpedo boats, four are monitors and one is a powerful cruiser.

Chief Constructor Hichborn has completed a tabulated statement showing the degree of completion of the 20 vessels now nearly ready for commission or rapidly approaching that condition, from which it appears that 17 of these vessels have already been launched and that the others will be afloat before the end of this year. Of the five battle ships, the Kearsarge, the Kentucky and the Illinois, building at Newport News, Va., are respectively 68, 66 and 55 per cent. complete.

The Alabama, at the Cramp yard, Philadelphia, has advanced to 63 per cent, and the Wisconsin, which is to be launched at the Union iron works, San Francisco, is exactly half finished. Of the ten torpedo boats the 26-knot Rowan (No. 8), at Seattle, is rated at 99 per cent, and will have her trial trip before the end of this week. The 30-knot Farragut (No. 11), the first of the destroyers to be finished by the government, has already been tried by the Scotts at San Francisco, and although readily making her guaranteed speed, has had the misfortune to sustain minor injuries, which may be easily remedied. The Dahlgren (No. 9) and the T. A. M. Craven (No. 10), 30-knot boats, building at Bath, Me., are listed 90 and 81 per cent. complete, but will not be deliverable to the government before spring. The two 23½ knot boats, the Davis (No. 12) and the Fox (No. 13) at Portland, Ore., are practically ready for trial and the Davis may have her speed run next week. The Mackenzie (No. 17) has just been completed by Hillman & Co., of Philadelphia, and her trial has been ordered for the first of next week. This little vessel is almost a year behind contract. The statistics of the remaining three 30-knot destroyers is as follows:

The Stringham (No. 19) at Wilmington, Del., 48 per cent; the Goldsboro (No. 20) at Portland, Ore., 28 per cent, and the Bailey (No. 21) at the works of the Gas Engine and Power Co., of New York, 37 per cent. The submarine torpedo boat Plunger also is within 15 per cent. of completion, and will probably be put into service next month. Two 12 knot tugboats, which are now being built at navy yards, have made rapid progress in the last month, the Penacock at New York being rated at 65 per cent, and the Pawtucket at Mare Island at 60 per cent. The sailing ship Chesapeake, building at the Bath Iron works, for use as a training vessel at the naval academy, is 30 per cent. ready. She has the distinction of being the first sheathed vessel designed for the American navy and the first sailing vessel laid down for naval purposes in over 20 years. The last ship under construction, except those whose keels have not been laid, is the cruiser Albany, building at Armstrongs, Elswick, England. She was only 40 per cent. completed when purchased together with the cruiser New Orleans from the Brazilian government just before war with Spain was declared, and work was only begun on her two weeks ago. The contractors have all material ready and have promised to deliver her within six months.

Letter From Porto Rico.

THE NEWS has received the following letter from Dr. Ben Frank, of this city, who is a Contract Surgeon with the First Kentucky, now in Porto Rico. The letter, which is dated "In field at Porto Rico, October 1st, is as follows:

Your paper received last night. I was delighted to get so much news from dear "Old Kentucky." I don't believe there is anything a soldier appreciates more than news from home. My life in camp is very hum-drum. Every morning we are called by bugle at half past five, we then have a piece by Prof. Martin's Newsboy Band. Prof. Martin has been standing the hardships like one of the boys. In fact he is one of the boys and is loved by everyone. At six o'clock in as call is sounded and we then sit down to partake of a soldier's breakfast which consists of fat meat, hard tack and coffee. At six thirty, sick call is sounded and the 1st Sergeant of different companies brings his sick men to hospital for treatment. We have anywhere from fifty to one hundred patients every morning. Men who are very sick are put in hospital, some are excused from duty, while others are returned to quarters for light duty, depending on severity of case. Sick call generally keeps us busy until nine o'clock. After that I have regular duty at the hospital all day. At 12 o'clock we have dinner and at six supper. This is my routine of work each day. Wednesday, Col. Castleman and Co. A went out for five days' trip in the mountains to hunt down Spanish guerrillas and sharpshooters. Tomorrow Co. G goes out for a scout and expects to take rations for ten days. I hope to be able to go with them. We will no doubt have an exciting trip for the hills are full of guerrillas and they have been causing the natives a great deal of trouble. The only way to get rid of these fellows is to hunt them down. The health of our regiment is improving some. I believe a great deal of sickness has been caused by bad food. I am sure the sick list would have been much larger had it not been for excellent management on part of Colonel Castleman. I would rather be under his command than any officer in service. He looks after the personal interests of each man. He knows every man in the regiment and is loved by them all. Col. Castleman is a gentleman as well as an officer and you can't say that of all officers. There are no new cases of yellow fever reported at Ponce this morning and believe the surgeons have it under control now. I have had a promotion given me as contract surgeon. The place pays $150 a month with rank as First Lieutenant. I have a Porto Rican boy with me, age fourteen, named Trinidad Martelo. Trinidad has been with me since I landed and has been of great service to me as an interpreter. He speaks very little English, but he has managed to teach me some Spanish. He is the best educated child I have seen here. Both his parents are dead and I hope to bring him back to America with me, for I have become very much attached to him. Col. Castleman has given me permission to take him but says he is afraid the government will object. We have heard nothing in regard to leaving the island, but I hope to eat Christmas dinner in "Old Kentucky". I am in splendid health and as long as I remain so, I have no kick to make. Regards to my friends who inquire of me. Send your papers regularly.

Very truly,
BEN FRANK.

He Got The Mustard.

It was in the army. The boys had a meal of beef that had been corned by a bath in a salt horse barrel. It was quite a treat. They all thought so until one of the party remarked, "A little mustard wouldn't go bad."

"That reminds me," said another. "You just wait a few minutes." A quarter of an hour later he returned and, producing a screw of paper, he said: "Oh, yes. Here's that mustard."

"Where did you get it?" said the others in chorus.

"Up at the surgeon's. The sick call, you remember, sounded as we were talking about the mustard. It occurred to me that a little mustard for my lame back would be just the thing."

"But you haven't got any lame back."

"But I have got the mustard." Philadelphia Press.

Delicately Put.

Be Careful

No woman can be too careful of her condition during the period before her little ones are born. Neglect or improper treatment then endangers her life and that of the child. It lies with her whether she shall suffer unnecessarily, or whether the ordeal shall be made comparatively easy. She had better do nothing than do something wrong.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

is the one and the only preparation that is safe to use. It is a liniment that penetrates from the outside. External applications are eternally right. Internal medicines are radically wrong. They are more than humbugs—they endanger life.

Mother's Friend helps the muscles to relax and expand naturally—relieves morning sickness—removes the cause of nervousness and headache—prevents hard and rising breasts—shortens labor and lessens the pains—and helps the patient to rapid recovery.

From a letter by a Shreveport, La., woman: "I have been using your wonderful remedy, Mother's Friend, for the last two months, and find it just as recommended."

A Great Naval Duel.

Henceforward—to use Nelson's words about his own most desperate action—"there was no maneuvering, there was only downright fighting," and great as was Jones' unquestionable merit as a handler of ships it was downright fighting endurance of the most extreme and individual character that won this battle. When thus in contact, the superiority of the British eighteens over the American twelves, though less than at a distance, was still great, but a far heavier disparity lay in the fabrics of the two enemies. The Richard was a very old ship, rotten, never meant for naval use. The Scerapis was new, on her first commission. The fight hitherto having engaged the port guns of the latter, the starboard lower gunports were still closed, and from the ships touching could not be opened. They were therefore blown off, and the fight went on.

"A novelty in naval combats was now presented to many witnesses, but to few admirers," quaintly wrote Lieutenant Dale, who was in the midst of the scene below decks. "The rammers were run into the respective ships to enable the men to load"—that is, the staves of the rammers of one ship entered the ports of the other as the guns were being loaded. "We became so close fore and aft," reported Pearson, "that the muzzles of our guns touched each other's sides," and even so, by the testimony of the lieutenant on the lower gun deck of the Scerapis, her guns could not be fully run out owing to the nearness of the vessels.—Captain Mahan in Scribner's.

An Anecdote of the Revolution.

Senator Bate of Tennessee told the following anecdote of Colonel Tom Sumter: Sumter was a great big giant of a fellow, with a voice like a fog horn. It is said his "holler" could be heard for miles. On one occasion when he was off on a foray the Tories came and captured his wife, Molly, and stripped the plantation of everything. When "Old Tom" came home and found Molly gone, his rage knew no bounds. Gathering together such forces as he could he put after the Tories. He overtook them on the third day and hung about until midnight. Then he deployed his forces around the camp and told them to wait his orders to fire. He was afraid of Molly being shot in the melee. So when he got everything ready he opened his big mouth and let out a yell that fairly made the earth tremble: "Lay down, Molly! Lay down, Molly!" and Molly, recognizing those stentorian tones, fell prone on her face, and after the last "Lay down, Molly!" came the command fire and charge. Molly was recaptured without hurt.

Must Have Been a Boston Man.

"Here is a story," says the Kennebec (Me.) Journal, "they are telling on a trolley conductor in the employ of an eastern Maine company. There being a slight wait, a certain member of the sex which is not considered eligible for enlistment and may therefore be sat on with impunity got the benefit of his ruling passion. Here is their conversation:

"The Woman—Are you going to the Bangor House?
"The Conductor—No, madam.
"The Woman—Is this car going to the Bangor House then?
"The Conductor—No, madam.
"The Woman—Well—er—er—is this the car to take to go to the Bangor House?
"The Conductor—It is, madam. It passes the door.
"She clambered in, and the villain smiled on."

Fortunes From Bananas.

Immense fortunes have been made out of the banana business. Revenues do not accrue alone from the sale of the fruit, for the leaves are used for packing; the juice, being strong in tannin, makes an indelible ink and shoe blacking; the wax found on the underside of the leaves is a valuable article of commerce; manilla hemp is made from the stems, and of this hemp are made mats, plaited work and lace handkerchiefs of the finest texture. Moreover, the banana is ground into banana flour. The fruit to be sold for dessert is ripened by the dry warmth of flaring gas jets in the storage places in which it is kept, and immense care has to be taken to prevent softening or overripening. The island of Jamaica yields great crops of this useful and money making fruit.

A Stone That Grows.

A West Gouldsboro (Me.) man tells a queer story about a stone that grows. It is an egg shaped, flinty looking rock, which he picked up in a cove near his home over 30 years ago. Then it weighed about 12 pounds and from its odd shape was kept in the house and on the doorstep as a curiosity. As the years passed the stone increased in size. Six years ago it weighed 40 pounds, and now it tips the scale at 65 pounds. The owner swears it is the same stone, and tells a likely story, with numerous witnesses to back him up.—Exchange.

Drunk on Smoking.

Moslems are forbidden to drink wines or spirits, but in Tunis they contrive to reach the same ends by smoking preparations of hemp flowers. The milder kind is called kif, and if used in moderation has no more effect than wine, but the concentrated essence, known as chira, produces intoxication as quickly as raw spirits and leads to delirium tremens.

Oh, the Pain of Rheumatism!

Rheumatism often causes the most intense suffering. Many have for years vainly sought relief from this disabling disease, and are to-day worse off than ever. Rheumatism is a blood disease, and Swift's Specific is the only cure, because it is the only remedy which can reach such deep-seated diseases.

A few years ago I was taken with inflammatory Rheumatism, which became so intense that I was for weeks unable to walk. I tried several prominent physicians and took their treatment faithfully, but was unable to get the slightest relief. In fact, my condition seemed to grow worse, the disease spread over my entire body, and from November to March I suffered agony. I tried many patent medicines, but none relieved me. Upon the advice of a friend I decided to try

S. S. S. Before allowing me to take it, however, my guardian, who was a chemist, analyzed the remedy, and pronounced it free of potash or mercury. I felt so much better after taking two bottles, that I continued the remedy, and in two months I was cured completely. The cure was permanent, for I have never since had a touch of Rheumatism though many times exposed to damp and cold weather.

He died two hours after the accident occurred. There was not a mark or a bruised place on his body, and some relatives think that the shock caused heart trouble. MANY persons are under the impression that the season for quail, partridge and pheasants opens in October, but it does not open until November 15, and closes January 1. TYPHOID FEVER.

Some Facts About the Dread Disease and How It Is Spread.

Typhoid fever is generally regarded at the present day, along with cholera and some other diseases, as belonging to the class of "water-borne" affections. In other words, it is believed that the germs of such diseases are carried, and perhaps propagated, in water. There is little doubt that this theory of typhoid fever is correct, and that in tracing any extended epidemic of the disease to its source we must first of all examine into the condition of the water supply.

Drinking water has been proved to be the cause of the spread of typhoid fever in many epidemics in this country and England; but there is little comfort in this for those who habitually drink something stronger than water, because, although during an epidemic the drinking water may be made safe by boiling, this is not enough.

If the water is contaminated the germs may be introduced into the body while brushing the teeth or washing the face. Or, again, salads and fruits which are eaten raw may be contaminated by the water in which they are washed. Typhoid fever has sometimes been spread in a city whose water supply was above reproach by means of milk or ice.

Milk need not be watered in order to become a vehicle for typhoid germs; the germs may be introduced into cans and bottles while these are being washed in water drawn from a contaminated well or brook at the dairy. Although destroyed by boiling, typhoid germs will resist a freezing temperature for a long time, and have been found in ice cut from a pond poisoned with sewage containing the bacilli of this disease.

Another means of the spread of typhoid has recently been discovered in oysters. Oystermen frequently place oysters in brackish water near the mouth of a creek or river in order to fatten them before they are brought to market. If this place happens to be near the mouth of a sewer containing typhoid poison, or if the creek water be contaminated, the oysters will take the virus within their shells, and so revenge themselves on those who eat them raw.

In some puzzling cases of typhoid it has been supposed that the food was infected by flies, which had carried the germs a long distance on their feet—a strong argument for the proper care of food in the fly season.

These are only a few of the ways in which this disease may be spread, but they are enough to show that, so far from feeling surprise that the disorder should be so common, we may rather wonder that we are not all its victims.—Youth's Companion.

PAID HER FRIEND.

She Owed Her a Good Turn and Promptly Squared the Account.

The first girl had been owing the second girl a good turn for nearly a year. The second girl had invited the first girl to attend a lawn party at her house, stay all night with her, and go on a wheeling trip in the morning. When they were dressing together on the evening of the party the hostess triumphantly announced that she had a new organdie frock for the occasion, and that it was as precisely like the gown just laid out by her visitor as could possibly be.

"Only mine has a pink slip for a foundation, and your slip is blue, isn't it?" she presently inquired.

"No," responded the visitor, who had been looking troubled for a few moments, with a happy smile, "mine is pink, too."

A moment later she invented an excuse to get the other girl from the common dressing-room for a moment, and, by and by, the hostess waited that her foundation skirt was nowhere to be found. Hasty searching, anger, tears, and the bitter donning of an older gown followed. Through all the unpleasant scene, the visitor, daintily and perfectly gowned herself, behaved beautifully.

Next morning as the two girls exchanged reminiscences of the affair the visitor confessed her share in the incomprehensible accident of the night before.

"I discovered while you were talking of your new gown," was her explanation of the matter, "that my slip had, somehow or other, been left behind, and I had nothing to wear. I didn't want to stay upstairs in the dressing-room all evening, and I didn't know what in the world to do until you gave me an idea by talking of the color of our respective foundations. So, while you were out of the room, I calmly slipped into yours, which was hanging in the closet, and which just fitted me, and I not only enjoyed the party extremely, dearie, but also got even with you for getting a frock just like mine, and for several other things as well."—Chicago Times-Herald.

THE TWO FLOWERS.

There was a flower within my garden growing;
In form and color delicately fair;
And fragrance from its petals ever throwing
It filled with sweetness all the morning air.
One night the frost stooped suddenly from overhead;
The morning sun arose—the flower was dead.

I had a wife who grew for years beside me;
None sweeter or more loving could there be;
Sootier and friend, whatever might be tide me,
Through varying fortunes clinging close to me.
One day the darkening clouds hung overhead;
There came a frost—at nightfall she was dead.

Sweet flower! Dear wife! these blossoms of existence,
One in the garden, one within the heart,
Bloomed for my gladness with a fond persistence,
Till frost and death had bidden both depart.

Yet rises in my soul the hope to me,
Both shall rebloom within the life to be.

An Army Wife.

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING.

(Copyrighted, 1896, by F. Tennyson Neely.)

SYNOPSIS.

Chapter I.—Fannie McLane, a young widow, is invited to visit the Graftons at Fort Sedgwick. Her sister tries to dissuade her, as Randolph Merriam (whom she had jilted for old McLane) and his bride are stationed there.

Chapter II.—Fannie McLane's wedding causes family feeling. A few months later she, while traveling with her husband, meets Merriam, on his wedding trip.

Chapter III.—Some time previous to this Merriam had gone on a government survey, fallen ill, and had been nursed by Mrs. Tremaine and daughter Florence. A hasty note from Mrs. McLane's stepson takes him to the plains.

Chapter IV.—Young McLane dictates to Merriam, a dying message, which is sent to Parry (a young Chicago lawyer and brother-in-law of Mrs. McLane). Reply causes Merriam to swoon. He is taken to the Tremaine's; calls for Florence.

Chapter V.—Engagement of Florence Tremaine to Merriam is announced; wedding shortly follows.

Chapter VI.—Mr. McLane is mysteriously shot in San Francisco. Merriam is greatly excited when he reads account in papers. While still in mourning Mrs. McLane prepares to visit Fort Sedgwick. She had secured her invitation by telling Mrs. Grafton she had never really cared for Merriam. Capt. Grafton when he learned of the proposed visit vainly objected.

CHAPTER VII.—CONTINUED.

For the life of him Capt. Grafton could not but feel that he had been tricked and deceived, and yet so plausible were the explanations he could not brush them entirely aside. At all events he would not now require his wife to recall the invitation, sent and accepted. It might even be as she claimed, that Fan loved and clung to her as her only dear and intimate friend, and craved her society and sympathy now in her bereavement and ill-health, and though still suspicious and ill-satisfied, he gave his reluctant assent to the plan, and was on hand at the junction to meet and welcome his unwelcome guest.

The Merriams had been paying a holiday visit to Floy's devoted parents at the cantonment, and were absent from Sedgwick while these preliminaries were being arranged. Otherwise Grafton might have cast conventionality aside and asked Randy for the truth about those alleged lovely times when they were on their wedding journey; but he could not bring himself to write, and indeed there was no time for letters to go and come and decide an issue that was already decided. It was Mrs. Grafton who, two days before the arrival of her lovely guest, broke the news of her coming to Mr. Merriam, and was astonished at his reception thereof.

It was almost sunset of one of those soft, languorous southern days that make even midwinter warm and grateful in the lower valley of the Bravo. Across the barren level of the parade the coopers were marching up from stables in their white frocks, and sending long shadows striding up the opposite eastward slope of the narrow canyon. The officers, in parties of three or four, were strolling homeward past the now shaded porticoes, on many of which, seated with their needlework or chatting with friends, the ladies of the garrison were awaiting the coming of their lords or lovers—or both. The smooth, broad walks were bright with groups of merry children or sedately trundled baby-carriages. Three or four of the bigger boys were galloping their ponies along the roadway, fresh sprinkled by the huge water-cart. The band that had been playing in its kiosk in front of the line had picked up its music-books and gone traunting backward for change of raiment before parade, skirting on the way the circular plat of withered grass maintained at vast expenditure of labor and water at the foot of the staff from whose shimmering peak hung, well-nigh motionless, the blue and scarlet and white of the national flag. Northwestward the distant line of the Mesquero stood blue-black against the cloudless sky. Away to the east rolled the dun billows of the "Jornada," illimitable in monotony and range. Downward at the foot of the San Mateo some Indian boys and girls were jabbering shrill expostulation to the Mexican herder who was swearing strange oaths at his usually placid burros, because they had the good manners to shrink at the edge of the stream wherein these children of nature were disporting, the laughter and screaming, even the splashing of the water, rising distinctly on the air. Out on the mesa to the north the quartermaster's herd was nodding slowly, sleepily homeward, powdered by a dust-cloud of its own raising, and over at the infantry barracks at the westward end of the long line scores of the men were already out in full dress uniform, awaiting the bugle call that should demand the assembly. Mrs. Grafton had been visiting up the row and was coming smilingly back, nodding greeting and salutation to the ladies on the verandas of the various quarters as she passed, yet walking eagerly so as to be at the gate, as was her habit, when her captain returned from stables; seeing which, some of the younger officers tried to detain her or impede her way. "The captain has stopped to take a drink at Buxton's, Mrs. Grafton. I wouldn't hurry if I were you," said one mendacious, mischievous sub. "I'll leave it to Merriam if he hasn't," thereby detaining Merriam, who was just as eager, apparently, to reach his own gate and receive the fond welcome in Floy's deep, dark brown eyes. Others, too, joined the laughing conspiracy, and gazing beyond them and seeing nothing of her lord among the groups still farther to the rear, she was laughingly surrendered and entered into joyous chat with her captors—the sight of one of the youngest, brightest and fairest of their number surrounded by half a dozen gallants being naturally a comfort to the lookers-on along the quarters—and when Randy, lifting his cap, would have deserted them and gone his way she was just coquette enough to care to hold the exhibition—and her attendants—a moment longer.

"Oh, Mr. Merriam! Don't go yet. I've really important news for you. Who do you think is coming to visit us?"

Randy had no idea. He smiled politely, even pleasantly, and said he couldn't imagine.

"Well, but guess," persisted Mrs. Grafton, her very pretty face very full of importance.

"The Walkers, from Stoneman?" suggested Randy.

"No, indeed! Nobody from that way. It's from the east."

"Mrs. and Miss Pollard, from Marcy?"

"Not a bit of it. No army people at all, but somebody you know very well and like very much."

Then Randy began to look queer, but still couldn't begin to guess. "I'm sure I'm at a loss," he faltered.

"Why, Fanny McLane, of course! She's been in miserable health since her husband died, and they've practically ordered her to try this climate; so she's coming to me. She'll be here Saturday, but of course you know she's in deep mourning yet and can't go anywhere."

For a moment Merriam was too amazed—too startled—to trust himself to speak, and she saw it, and with the quick intuition of her sex, saw, too, that something must be done to relieve the embarrassment that would fall upon the party.

"She was one of my bridesmaids—Fanny Hayward," she hurriedly explained to the surrounding group—"and the loveliest girl you ever saw; and, just think of it, Mr. Minturn, now she's a disconsolate widow with I don't know how much money all her own," and then nervously she cast anxious glances at Merriam, and again addressed him, as though in self-defense. "You know we visited with her on our way west, and she told me of her charming meeting with you and Mrs. Merriam on your wedding journey, and the lovely times you had before they had to go to San Francisco," and now her voice had become timid and appealing, for she saw that something was very, very much amiss. Merriam's face had flushed, even through its coat of tan, but was now a yellow-brown, all its happy, healthful glow vanished, and Billy Whitaker, looking uneasily at him, had linked an arm in his and seemed about to urge him to come away; yet Merriam had to say something, and this, in evident constraint, is what he said:

"Yes—we did meet—Mrs. McLane—I'm very sorry to hear she's been ill, and am much surprised to hear she's coming here. Excuse me, Mrs. Grafton, I must hurry on."

That evening Floy and her husband failed to attend the formal hop which was held each week, and their absence was noted, for she loved to dance, and had promised waltzes and two steps without number to her old friends of the Riflers and the cavalry both. Some one proposed going after them. Mrs. Hayne did call on her way home, for she left early, and inquired anxiously for Florence. "She has a severe headache," said Randy, who came to the door with gloom in his eyes, "and she felt too good-for-nothing to attempt it, so I persuaded her to go to her room." He asked them in, but did not invite. Both Hayne and his wife noted that, and both felt they knew the cause of all the trouble when they met Whitaker ten minutes later and learned from him that the Graftons expected a guest from the east on Saturday—Mrs. McLane.

And Saturday evening she came, almost at the same hour at which she first set eyes on that dreary landscape, and wondered what was the name of those far, blue hills, and who those officers and ladies could be. But this time it was the train from the northeast that bore her in, and its companion from the "Sunset Route" was not there; neither was there a swarm of officers and ladies. There was only one of each—a grave, dignified, soldierly man in undress uniform—a young, pretty, stylishly attired dame at his side. The Pullman came to a stop at the platform, the porter sprang out laden with bags and bundles; the conductor stepped off and raised his cap and offered his hand to a vision of female charms, a fair, sweet smiling face framed in a dainty little cap. The heavy crape veil was thrown back, and the slender, rounded form was decked in somber weeds, yet how gracefully, effectively was it draped. Even Grafton could not fail to note it. No sign of dust and grime of travel was there. The shrouding, protecting veil and duster had been discarded only just before they reached the station; Annette had stowed them carefully away in the shawl-strap, while her bereaved mistress carefully and skillfully arrayed herself in veil and bonnet that had been boxed through-out the journey. She stepped forth into Harriet's welcoming arms as trim as though she herself had just issued from a bandbox, her joy at being once more with such fond friends decorously tempered by the sense of her ever-present, all-pervading sorrow, and the consciousness of her delicate and uncertain health. Only a moment did she allow herself in Harriet's embrace. No time must be lost in precipitating herself upon the massive and not too eloquently welcoming captain, who held out a hand in his untutored army way, as hands had been extended for the score of years he had been in service, and not at the height of the shoulder, as hers, after the alien mode of the 90's. Into his arms she did not throw herself, yet looked she as she meant to look and have him see her look, and be impressed accordingly, as though such was her sense of his lofty character and her own needs of some strong arm on which to lean, she might even be glad to find shelter there.

"There was always something so appealing about Fan," said Mrs. Grafton sometimes, and indeed there was.

And then the train moved on, and Grafton looked grimly at the stack of Saratogas up the platform, while the orderly was loading bags, baskets and bundles into the roomy Concord wagon, and the quartermaster's team came rattling alongside to load up with heavy luggage.

"I won't have to see—anybody to-night, will I, dearest?" pleaded the widow of her devoted friend, as they bowed away to the post. "I look like a hag after this dreadful journey, and I'm so tired. Oh! do you get soft water here, or is it all this wretched alkali?" and she studied her friend's already suffering complexion and read her answer there. No matter; she had borax and—other correctives—in abundance.

Inspection was all over. The cavalry were all at stables down under the bluff as they whirled into the great, spreading garrison and went spinning up the roadway in front of officers' quarters. The captain lifted both ladies out at the gate and assisted Annette to alight; then, giving brief direction to the servant, he raised his cap: "And now you are at home, Mrs. McLane, and I will leave you to Harriet while I go down to my horses awhile," and Fan followed him with swimming eyes.

"How blessed you are, Harriet!" she murmured. "So strong, so noble a man! Ah, I have so needed you—both. I'm so thankful to be here."

And as they led her beneath the shaded porch, and bright eyes on other porches looked eagerly on, and her own bright, brimming eyes took in the many odd, unfamiliar yet attractive surroundings in this cozy army home, Fan was wondering how she could ever have thought of such a life—how it was possible for Harriet to be happy in it, while her hostess was already wondering if, after all, she was quite as content and happy as she was before Fanny came.

CHAPTER VIII.

A week went by, and by that time, as a member of the Grafton household and a social success at Sedgwick, the lovely widow was an established fact. Everybody, as in duty bound, had called within the seven days. Mr. and Mrs. Merriam with the others and not among the last; but they chose Tuesday evening, which was not a hop night, but the very evening on which dozens of others would be calling, and even then they went in company with the Haynes, and found, as they expected—indeed as they knew—the little army parlor full of people.

Mrs. McLane's welcome was charming. Already the soft air and sunshine, as she was saying, had been of infinite benefit, and her physician must have known exactly what to prescribe for her, for she felt ever so much better, and her cough was so much less frequent. Certainly she was looking wonderfully well—whether Dame Nature or some more subtle artist had touched the rounded cheeks and the framework of those lustrous eyes. As the quartette entered, Mrs. Hayne, the elder matriarch, leading, and the men arose and the women callers looked smilingly on and Mrs. Grafton gracefully presented the first comer, the welcome ardent Mrs. Hayne was cordial and gracious, with just a tinge of reserve, but it was Florence, standing with flushed cheeks just behind her friend and ally, the lovely blue eyes sought out and then lighted instantly with joy and recognition. Both slender white hands were extended, and with a little cry of "Mrs. Merriam! Oh, how glad I am to see you again!" the accomplished little lady stepped forward, uplifted her soft lips, and—kissed her. What Florence would have looked and said or done had she not been fully forewarned cannot be hazarded here. "I think it more than probable she will kiss you, Floy," Merriam had said, "so look as unconcerned as you can." Look unconcerned Floy did not. She reddened. She almost recoiled, but Randolph was at her elbow, and bent quickly forward in admirable time, with the most audacious pleasantness. Anyone would have sworn that he hoped to be similarly welcomed. It was more than Mrs. McLane had bargained for.

"Why, Mr. Merriam!" she exclaimed, starting back in apparent confusion and astonishment.

"Do not be disconcerted," said he, with placid smile. "I've always understood that a man should share his wife's joys as well as her sorrows," but the rest was lost because everybody began to laugh, and to believe as Mrs. Hayne and Mrs. Grafton did not, that the relations between the McLanes and Merriams on that idyllic wedding journey must indeed have been delightful. There were two men, however, who laughed not—Hayne and Whitaker. Grafton was away on duty, and there was one woman who felt a stinging sense of defeat—Fanny McLane herself. In that one action of Merriam there was manifest utter indifference to her former fascinations, utter defiance to her powers.

A dozen people, altogether, must have been gathered in the room at the moment, and some officers were seated on the veranda without. There were not chairs enough, so the men gossiped about the piano, while the women grouped about the guest, and Mrs. McLane had no opportunity of singling out and renewing her advance upon Mrs. Merriam. Presently those who had been there longest arose to go, and their place was speedily taken by other arrivals; that soon let the Haynes and Merriams out, and as they tripped away homeward each seemed to draw a long breath.

"Won't you come and sit a little while?" begged Mrs. Hayne, as they neared the captain's gate.

"Not to-night, thanks," was Merriam's reply, as he felt Floy's prompt twitch at his sleeve. She was still nervous. She wished to get away and to bear him with her.

"Merriam," said Hayne, "I admire your nerve, perhaps I should say your cheek."

"Well, it was rather a trying moment," said Merriam, gravely. "Florence would rather be struck than kissed by her, and I feared she could not avoid showing it."

"Well, you created a diversion, certainly," said Hayne. "Good-night, if you must go." But Mrs. Hayne did not speak until they were out of sight. She was anxiously watching Florence, who, beyond a barely audible "Good night," had not uttered a word.

"Lawrence," said she, finally, "that may have been a stroke of finesse on Mr. Merriam's part, and may have created a diversion, as you say, and distracted attention from Floy, but—she didn't like it."

Saw Through the Pastor's Scheme.

In a Virginia church the minister announced that a collection would be taken up to defray the cost of coal for heating the church. Everybody contributed but John —, who gave a sly wink as the plate was presented to him, but nothing else. The minister noticed John's dereliction, but surmised that he might have left his money at home. A similar contribution was levied the following Sunday. As before, everyone gave except John, who looked sly. The minister wondered, and after services took his parishioner to task.

"Now, John," said he, "why didn't you give something, if it was but a little?"

"Ha, ha, I know better," said John, slyly.

"John!" cried the minister.

"Yes, Mr. —."

"What do you mean?"

"Oh, nothing. Just that I kin see through your little game; that's all."

"John, your words are disrespectful and require an explanation. What do you mean?"

"Oh, now, a-trying to pull the wool over my eyes, a-trying to make us believe you want the money to buy coal to heat the church, when you know it's heated by steam."—Baltimore Sun.

Balloon Ascensions.

There are at least five well-authenticated cases of aeronauts having made ascensions on horseback. In 1828 Green, the aeronaut, went up from the Eagle tavern, in City Road, London, seated on a pony, which stood on a platform suspended from the balloon. The pony was not in the least disconcerted, and a safe descent was made at Beckenham. In 1850 Mr. Green repeated this experiment. Lieut. Gale lost his life in the same year in attempting a similar ascent at Bordeaux. In 1852 Mme. Poitevin, who is credited with several such exploits, went up from Cremona gardens, and in 1858 she ascended on horseback and was very nearly drowned in the sea near Malaga. Previously to this equestrian ascents in England had been stopped by the police. It may be remarked that the first four-legged animal that went up in a balloon was a sheep, which, in company with a cock and a duck, ascended from Versailles in 1783.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Hugo Lived on $20 a Month. As to our expenditure, it must be kept within the narrowest limits, as the future looks very doubtful, and the surest sources of income may fail altogether, or, at all events, payments may be delayed. I myself manage to exist on 100 francs (£4) per month. This is my estimate per diem: Rent, 1 franc; breakfast (cup of chocolate), 50 centimes; dinner, 1 franc 25 centimes; fuel, 25 centimes; total, 3 francs. That makes up 90 francs per month. The surplus, 10 francs, is for washing and pourboires."—Hugo's Letter to His Wife While in Exile.

THE MAJOR'S EXPERIENCE.

From the Detroit Free Press.

One of the staunchest supporters of the deep-water way from the Great Lakes to the ocean is Major A. C. Bishop, of 715 Third Ave., Detroit, a civil engineer of wide experience and considerable prominence in his profession. He was assistant engineer on the Hudson River Railroad in 1850 and has since conducted large engineering operations. He has been located in Detroit, since 1815, and has a large acquaintance among the business men and citizens of this city.

Two years ago, for the first time, Major Bishop was in the hospital. For two months he had the best of medical attendance, but when he was discharged he was not like the Major Bishop of old. When asked regarding his health, he said: "When I had my last spell of sickness and came out of the hospital I was a sorry sight, I could not gain my strength, and could not walk over a block for several weeks."

Major Bishop.

"I noticed some articles in the newspapers regarding Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, which convinced me that they were worth trying and I bought two boxes. I did not take them for my complexion but for strength. After using them I felt better, and know they did me worlds of good. I am pleased to recommend them to invalids who need a tonic to build up their constitutions."

"A. C. BISHOP."

Subscribed and sworn to before me this eighth day of January, 1898.

ROBERT E. HULL, Jr., Notary Public.

The pure, powerful vegetable ingredients in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People supply the antidote for poisonous matter in the blood and add those elements needed to build up body and brains. Many diseases long supposed by the medical profession to be incurable have succumbed to the potent influence of these pills. They can be taken by young or old, being harmless in their nature, but powerful in eliminating disease.

HE HAD A FINE TIME.

Got His Muscles Up Fighting Bugs and Insects Down in the Country.

"Feel better after your outing, neighbor?" asked one Joy street man of another.

"Stronger than a locomotive. Haven't a touch of rheumatism and can handle myself like an athlete."

"In training while you were gone?"

"Yes; fighting bugs; all kinds of winged insects. It was just bill! bang! all day and most of the night. Exercise! I not only struck and killed and danced, but went through every possible contortion of the human body. A moth miller is a nice, pretty, innocent little thing, but get 25 of them inside of your collar all at once and see how it goes. But that was only an item. While the millers were enjoying themselves I had my eyes full of some small bug that defies every form of death except by drowning; big beetles would be hitting my ears with a deafening noise, the mosquito fleet assailed me at every angle, the flies played the part of rough riders and some kind of bugs in three colors that gave forth a sound like that of a buzz saw zipping through a hardwood knot did a regular war dance. They drove me out at the finish, but my muscles are harder and more flexible than they have been since I was a schoolboy. I might have survived it another week, but when a lot of bees tried to live in my old straw hat while I was wearing it I took a lumber wagon and caught the first train for home."—Detroit Free Press.

A New York Central Innovation.

George H. Daniels, of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, has made an announcement which is of a rather startling nature, but it is one which ought to please the patrons of that great system, and particularly those who travel on mileage books. The circular reads as follows:

Mileage books, good for 500 miles and 1,000 miles travel, are now on sale at all stations on the New York Central (divisions and branches) at the rate of $10 and $20 respectively.

These tickets are good until used, and are available for passage on the main line of the New York Central, and all of its branches and divisions, including the Harbinger, Putnam, Home, Watertown & Ogdensburg, Carthage & Adirondack, Geneva & Lyons and the Adirondack (Utica to Montreal) divisions.

Mileage books will be issued in the name of the head of a family or firm, and will be available for the use of any member of such family or for any traveler for a firm, provided the name of such member or traveler is written in the book by the agent selling it, in the place designated. They may be honored for transportation by the conductors of all trains, including limited trains, but only to the end of the run of each conductor.

If the holder of such ticket desires to ride beyond the run of a conductor, or on a night train, or to a point on a branch line, he should present his mileage ticket to the ticket agent, who will detach the proper mileage and issue a mileage exchange ticket, on which baggage will be checked to any station on the New York Central or any of its branch lines, thus insuring the traveler against disturbance after retiring, or of rechecking baggage.—From the Pittsburgh Post, August 21, 1898.

Eminent Surgeon—I never think, my friend; I always know.

Dear Editor:—If you know of a solicitor or canvasser in your city or elsewhere, especially a man who has solicited for subscriptions, insurance, nursery stock, books or tailoring, or a man who can sell goods, you will confer a favor by telling him to correspond with us; or if you will insert this notice in your paper and such parties will cut this notice out and mail to us, we may be able to furnish them a good position in their own and adjoining counties. FRILLS OF FASHION.

Notes Gathered for the Information of Ladies Who Follow the Styles.

Grace-loving French women declare that the fad for flounced skirts has gone too far, and that they have never approved of the fashion.

There is infinite variety in the new veilings for autumn wear. All take the direction of close-set small spots. The most becoming have a groundwork of gray or white with black chenille dots, but the newest design is of black silk net with lace sprays in cream or white, with a border to match. The veilings with chenille dots grouped in sets of three, five or seven have not met with favor, as they tend to give the wearer an uneasy appearance.

Short red jackets made of light cloth are being much worn with white duck suits by those fortunate enough to be in the mountains or by the sea. Crystal buttons trim the sweet little coats.

Many of the gowns of the immediate future will fasten at the back. The woman who does not have some one to help her will find this an inconvenient style. But those who keep up with the procession of the well dressed must expect to be inconvenienced. The princess gown owes its charm to this arrangement in a great measure. Word has come from Paris that we must prepare for the return of buttons; and wonderful buttons they are, too. Large stones, cameos, emeralds and amethysts, diamond shaped, oval, and square, are to be used extensively as the season advances.

Parisian manufacturers are turning out epaulettes with fringes hanging to the waist and deep flounces of fringe are being woven to hang from the knees to the hem of the skirt.

White stockings are coming rapidly into fashion again in France and are considered quite smart with light gowns.

The ordinary foulard nearly covered with a white design has been extremely fashionable this season, but for early autumn wear satin foulard in the most exquisite new tints, with small white or cream designs, is taking its place. The satin foulard is far richer looking than the other and wears twice as well.—N. Y. Sun.

CARELESS SPEECH.

It Is Better to Speak Well of People Than to Speak Ill of Them.

The habit—for it is often nothing more—of deteriorating speech is so common that it would be well for all of us to stop and think about it.

This sort of thing is so often heard: "I don't think he is so very pretty as people say," or, "I don't think he (or she) is so very clever"—or economical, or stylish, or bright, or cheerful, or a thousand other things. We do not stop to think that while perhaps we have heard, we do think her pretty; and, again, if not very clever, surely interesting, and all the others in like measure. It is merely a habit with many people, not skin-deep, but just the cruel and unfortunate habit of depreciating speech. A woman with a sharp tongue, but with the tenderness of hearts, the most generous of natures, but with a keenly critical mind and a rare intuition as to character, was brought up "all standing," as she expressed it, after she had been talking one day with a friend about several people, and before a young girl who was visiting the friend.

In a sudden lull in the talk the girl said, as if by uncontrollable impulse: "Don't you like anybody?" "What do you mean?" said the startled woman. The girl blushed and hesitated, and then said: "Please pardon me, but it seemed so." Little more was said; it was passed off and passed by, as in the polite world things that are unpleasant are passed over; but into the heart of that woman the criticism sank deeply, and from that hour she watched and guarded her tongue. Now she does not depreciate in speech, and, if she cannot appreciate, is silent. It is well to remember the wise words of Emerson: "Omit the negative propositions. Don't waste yourself in rejection nor hark against the bad, but chant the beauty of the good." What a changed and better world we should all live in if we only followed that advice!—Harper's Bazar.

Uses of Charcoal.

Foul water is purified by it.

Tainted meat can be sweetened by its use.

No better known disinfectant can be used.

Charcoal is so porous that it absorbs and condenses gases rapidly.

Strewn over the skins of birds and animals it will prevent all unpleasant odors.

A teaspoonful added to a half a glass of water is a remedy for acidity of the stomach and often relieves sick headache.

It absorbs the gases and relieves the distended stomach pressing against the nerves which extend from the stomach to the head.

Charcoal laid on a burn causes the pain to abate immediately, and by renewing the application will heal and cure—if it is not deep—in a few days.—Philadelphia Record.

Give as Well as Receive.

Give out as well as take in, or expend as well as receive. God never intended us to selfishly enjoy the good things of His providence, and of His grace, but to be distributors of His material and gracious bounties. There is a peculiar pleasure in giving, which more than compensates for the relinquishment of what we lay out for others' benefit.—Detroit Free Press.

BOOKS FOR THE BLIND.

Those in the Chicago Public Library Are Very Seldom Called For.

There is a sad little corner in the great public library, yet it has conferred happiness on a great many Chicagoans who are afflicted with the loss of sight. It contains the books for the blind. The first collection of these books was a private undertaking of a West side woman, who has since died. In August, 1893, the works were turned over to the public library and November 26, 1897, a special room was set aside for them in the new building. Since that time a few more volumes have been donated. This collection is not as well known as the authorities would desire.

Here may be seen the three well-known systems for the blind—the old Moon and the new Moon, then comes the New York point, which is of much later date and is somewhat similar to the Braille system, yet a vast improvement on it in many ways. There are scarcely more than 30 readers and only 14 regular ones. On the application of an ordinary library ticket the books are sent to the outlying stations, with the proviso they are to be kept but two weeks and cannot be renewed. It is interesting to note that the old people are inclined to use the Moon system, while the younger prefer the New York point. Children distinguish the lines easily by touch, and those who have become blind by accident invariably adopt the latter method.

There is quite a promising boy of about 12 who comes to read regularly twice a week. He always carries his violin case with him, so supposedly he is returning from his lesson and the temptation to pass the library is too great. He has very advanced ideas on amusements for the blind. He owns a pack of playing cards made on the American type system and plays his game of cribbage frequently with his grandfather, often coming out the victor.

There is a blind man on the West side who was taught at Jacksonville, Ill., and with his left hand can read aloud the left-hand page, while with a finger of his right he can read to himself and tell the listener what the latter contains immediately after he has completed the reading aloud of the opposite page. Considering the time and thought spent over the printing of these books, their prices are not so exorbitant. The cost of "Ben-Hur" stands for $14; Justin McCarthy's "History of Our Own Times," $35; Andersen's "Fairy Tales," $35; "Tom Brown's Schooldays," $7; "Arabian Nights," $8.—Chicago Chronicle.

He Noticed the Likeness.

A Parisian swell recently had a crayon picture of himself made, which he afterward pretended to find fault with. "It does not bear the slightest resemblance to me," said he, "and I will not take it." The artist protested, but all to no avail. After the dandy had left the painter added to the portrait a magnificent pair of ass' ears, and exhibited it in the window, thus altered, to the gaze of the curious public. It hadn't been long exposed when the dandy entered the artist's studio in a towering rage, and, finding that threats amounted to nothing, he at last offered to buy it, even at a considerable advance upon the original price. "It wasn't strange you didn't recognize your resemblance to the picture at first," said the painter, "but I knew you'd notice the likeness as soon as I added those ears."—Spare Moments.

Porter Sues Empress.

The German empress recently lost her insignia of the Royal Order of Victoria and Albert, a valuable jewel surrounded with brilliants. A porter found the bauble and claimed the reward as provided by the laws of Prussia, which give the finder of an article one-tenth of the value of the property restored to its owner. The empress offered him 100 marks, which he refused, and as the empress would not pay a tenth of what the insignia was worth the porter has begun a legal action against the empress' cabinet.—Philadelphia Press.

If it was only health, we might let it cling.

But it is a cough. One cold no sooner passes off before another comes. But it's the same old cough all the time.

HAPPY MOTHERS AND HEALTHY CHILDREN.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Goes Straight to the Cause of All Female Troubles and Assures a Healthy Maternity.

Mrs. M. SINGER, 104 Hudson Ave., Rochester, N. Y., writes to Mrs. Pinkham as follows:

"When I applied to you for advice I had been suffering some years from debility, nervousness, etc. I had had several miscarriages and was pregnant when I wrote to you."

"I am grateful to say that after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was considerably better, and after using three more it brought me where I am to-day. I am well, and the mother of a three-months' old baby."

"Doctors had failed to help me. I have no one to thank but Mrs. Pinkham and her wonderful remedy."

Mrs. ELLA DUNGAN, Reeder's Mills, Iowa, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I thank you for what your medicine and advice have done for me."

"I have a baby two months old. When he was born I was sick only fifteen minutes, whereas with my other children I was sick for two or three days, and also suffered with my left leg, and could get nothing to relieve the pain but morphine. My leg did not trouble me at all this time. I had no after pains and was not as weak as I had been before

RYHME OF RHYMES.

Wild on the mountain peak the wind
Repeats its old refrain,
Like ghosts of mortals who have sinned
And fain would sin again.

For "wind" I do not rhyme to "mind."
Like many mortal men.
"Again" (when one reflects) 'twere kind
To rhyme as if "agen."

I never met a single soul
Who spoke of "wind" as "wined,"
And yet we use it, on the whole,
To rhyme to "find" and "blind."

We say, "Now don't do that agen,"
When people give us pain.
In poetry, nine times in ten,
It rhymes to "Spain" or "Dane."

Oh, which is wrong or which is right?
Oh, which is right or wrong?
The sound in prose familiar quite
Or those we meet in song?

To hold that "love" can rhyme to "prove"
Requires some force of will,
Yet in the ancient lyric groove
We meet them rhyming still.

This was our learned fathers' wont
In prehistoric times.
We follow it, or if we don't
We oft run short of rhymes.

—Andrew Lang in Longman's Magazine.

DICK'S GOOD TIME.

A Very Human Boy Enjoying His Well Earned Reward.

A portly gentleman sat on the porch and smiled while a small boy, also smiling, painted the front fence.

"Look at that boy," the portly man remarked to a visitor. "He thinks he is having a good time. A small boy is surely the drollest creature on earth. When I was a youngster, I remember that there were certain kinds of work I considered play, and one of them was painting. I was always crazy to paint. Many times I have taken a bucket of muddy water and an old paint brush and have spent a whole half day putting a thick coat on the side of my father's barn.

"So with my boy Dick, the little chap painting the fence. He has always been crazy to paint. He is enjoying himself now—you can see he is, and he will paint that whole fence, too, just as well as he knows how. I don't care if it is a trifle smeared. He's getting joy, solid joy, thicker than the paint on his hands and clothes.

"There's a mean side to it too. He wanted to paint the fence, and I wanted the weeds pulled out of the yard. So, like an underhanded rascal, I bargained with him. I told him that if he would pull all the weeds out I would let him paint the fence. He went through the other job like a soldier—he hates to pull weeds; all boys do—and now he thinks he is getting his reward. It is a downright shame to fool him that way, don't you think so?"

The portly gentleman chuckled again, and the small boy, wild with joy, went on plastering paint on the fence.—Detroit Free Press.

Crossing the Threshold.

Crossing the threshold was and is the most critical period of the wedding day with all races, not even excepting the Anglo-Saxon.

The superstitious fears of the many, always particularly alert on the occasion of a marriage, culminate in this final act of the drama. The lifting of the bride over the threshold or her stepping across it is the signal in Persia, Arabia and among the Copts of Egypt for the sacrifice of a goat or a sheep. Among the Aenezes, according to Burekhardt, the bridegroom simply kills a lamb in front of his father-in-law's tent, and the ceremony, but for the running of the bride from one tent to another, is complete. Perhaps the purest symbolical act is that of the Transylvanian Saxon bridal pair, who step over the threshold with their hands tied together. Some of these Transylvanian customs are remarkable and must be survivals from a very ancient period. The bridegroom never wears the shirt made for him by the bride except on his wedding day and at his burial, just as the veil of the Japanese bride becomes one day her shroud.—London Spectator.

GREENBACKS or Government Money.

At close of our Civil War in 1865, there appeared in the London Times the following:

"If that mischievous financial policy which had its origin in the North American Republic during the late Civil War in that country, should become indurated down to a fixture, then that government will furnish its money without cost. It will have all the money that is necessary to carry on its trade and commerce. It will become prosperous beyond precedent in the history of civilized nations of the world. The brain and wealth of all countries will go to North America. THAT GOVERNMENT MUST BE DESTROYED OR IT WILL DESTROY EVERY MONARCHY ON THIS GLOBE."

The famous Hazzard circular, to capitalists in New York, and the Buell Bank circular to United States Bankers, both emanating from London, and the fabulous corruption fund raised in England and Germany, estimated at $1,500,000, were the agents that secured the closing of our mints against silver.

The "walk into my parlor" policy of England, during and since the Spanish War, is the latest evidence of English Diplomacy in shaping the destiny of the United States Government.

Notwithstanding the famine price of wheat, the Spanish War, and fabulous expenditures of money by our government during the past year, gold has increased in value eleven per cent. and all other values decreased in the same proportion.

For a thorough understanding of the money question, or silver issue, the Cincinnati Enquirer has uniformly given evidence of its ability to teach, explain and produce all facts and truth. It is a paper that ought and can be read by all classes with pleasure and profit.
